

November 24, 2009 Tuesday 4:30PM
145 Peyton Hall Auditorium

Different Cultures, Same Science

All countries have different languages, customs, rules and food. In particular, there are a wide variety of fairly common implicit assumptions and understandings in Japan. You would feel very convenient and comfortable if you know how to behave under those conditions, but may be embarrassed if you do not. I will present my personal experiences that made me realize huge cultural difference in the course of international collaborations toward the same scientific goal.

Y A S U S H I S U T O

Department of Physics, The University of Tokyo and Global Scholar, Department of Astrophysical Sciences,
Princeton University